Alex happy to be back on 125s

ALEX GAULT, the 15-year-old Scottish road racer, was back on a 125 again at Knockhill, thanks to some generous personal sponsors and Craig Linfoot, Dan's father, who offered the hire of the machine for the weekend.

Despite his lack of practice, Gault qualified 13th, but had climbed to seventh place on lap 11, battling with Tom Hayward.

Hayward took the inside line in a bid to overtake and Gault, forced wide, lost the front-end and slid into the gravel trap!

The disappointment has not put Gault off a full time return to the 125GP class, if he can find the funding.

"That's where I should be, I want to be back there, the 125 is a proper race bike, but if I am honest I don't care if it's a 125, a 250 or a 600! The race was brilliant," said Gault.

Alex and his dad, Alex Snr, are looking at both the Oulton Park or Silverstone rounds for him to try again on the 125.
